North of Strasbourg, EuroVelo 15 crosses forests via the Rhine's flood-prevention barrier, up to La Wantzenau. Then EV15 joins the Rhine itself at Gamsheim, with its great locks and the largest fish pass in Europe. After Sessenheim, visited by the famed German writer Goethe, once in love with the minister's daughter, the Rhine's canalized section ends at Beinheim. Back on the Rhine's flood-prevention barrier, crossing forests and nature reserves like that at Munchhausen, the way leads to Lauterbourg, a fortified town, and last stop in Alsace.

Cycle route

Cross the town of Strasbourg via the well-laid-out cycle paths. Then enjoy cycling through the splendid Robertsau Forest. After that, the stage alternates between parts on cycle paths and parts on roads shared with motorized traffic as you pass through towns and villages. You travel close to the Rhine between Beinheim and Lauterbourg. There are cycle links to Germany (via bridges or ferries).
