Thématique
Canals & intimate rivers

Little by little, the surrounding terrain becomes increasingly demanding, as the meadows give way to dense forests rich in legends. The river Meuse edges towards the Ardennes range, taking the cyclist with it. The highpoint of this tortuous route is in Monthermé where, after a little effort to reach the Roche à Sept Heures viewpoint, the sheer perfection of the loop in the Meuse can be admired in all its glory.

The route

You can leave Charleville via a path running alongside the Meuse from the Mont-Olympe campsite. From the Place Ducale, head down Rue du Moulin. Then, take the footbridge located next to the Rimbaud Museum. Please note: some sections are unsurfaced.

The rest of the route runs alongside the river Meuse and presents no particular difficulty.

Links

From Monthermé, it is possible to join another greenway taking you along the Semoy River. The latter's secretive valley is a joy for those who appreciate nature.

Don't miss

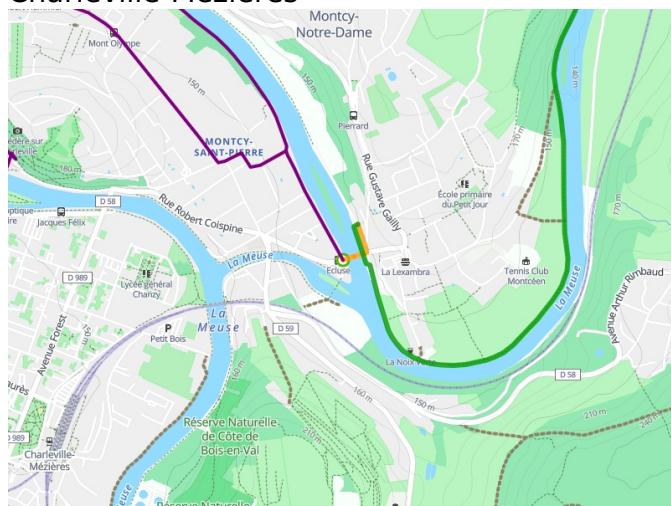

Charleville-Mézières: Place Ducale, the grand main square; Musée Rimbaud and Maison des Ailleurs (both dedicated to the incendiary 19th-century poet Rimbaud, from these parts); Festival International du Théâtre de Marionnettes (International Puppet Festival, held uneven years, 3rd week of September)

Bogny-sur-Meuse: for the viewpoint and the legend of Aymon's four sons; the Musée de la Métallurgie Ardennoise (on iron-working); the Centre d'Exposition des Minéraux et Fossiles des Ardennes (on local geology)

Monthermé: for its many fine viewpoints
