The greenway skirts around Louhans Châteaurenaud's centre, but signposting can guide you to its historic heart, with the cobbled Grande Rue, still the main thoroughfare through town, boasting a staggering 157 arcades. Among the town's medieval riches, don't miss the 17th-century Hôtel-Dieu (an historic hospital). After enjoying a bumpy tour of the town centre by bike, cycle off in the direction of the Jura Mountains' foothills. Crossing the motorway, you cross the frontier between the French counties of Saône-et-Loire and Jura. The route leads you gently on to the town of Lons-le-Saunier, bringing you out beside the site where the famed La Vache qui rit (Laughing Cow) cheese is made.

The route

A signpost along the greenway indicates the way into Louhans Châteaurenaud town centre. Make the most of the detour to discover this place's historic treasures.

Arriving at Lons-le-Saunier, the Voie Bressane comes to an end at the Chemin des Dombes. From here, to reach the town centre, it's best to take a left to pass over the greenway via Avenue de Montciel, then to turn left onto Rue du Couchant and Chemin du Bas (accessible only to pedestrians and cyclists), riding beside the railway track. Take care crossing Route Macornay. Carry on to Chemin des Quarts, then very soon after, take a left onto a firm path. Continue beside the rail track, via the back of the train station (access to the platforms possible) and cross a car park, leading you to an underpass linking Route de Montaigu to Rue Rouget de l'Isle. This way allows you to reach the town centre safely.

You'll see how small kilometre-markers have been put in place along the whole route.

Important: note that along the Voie Bressane, certain stretches of the greenway can be used by agricultural machinery; bear this in mind, noting that the portions concerned are signalled.
